Students will connect with their social studies exploration of the regions of the United States by choosing a specific region to represent.

Learning Goals:

- develop an understanding of how to create depth by overlapping
- demonstrate an understanding of foreground, middleground and background.

Techniques:

Paper cutting, collage, craftsmanship

Materials:

12"x18" colored fadeless paper
Cut paper scraps
Scissors

Images of United States landscapes

Instructional Sequence:

1. The students should research their state or region and bring in a picture of the place they will be creating.

2. Show examples of students work from previous years. Point out that students in the past selected a prominent geographical feature of the state to focus on in the collage. Demonstrate how to choose a background color which will serve as the background for the landscape. Then demonstrate how to tear and cut pieces of paper to form objects in the distance. Overlap objects for the middle ground and the background. Students should have a minimum of 3 layers of paper to create depth and the entire landscape should be made out of cut paper including the small details.

Ongoing Assessments: Observing students at work. Self-assessments to determine if the students have achieved the project goals.
